To whom it may concern:

In January, 1995 my wife and I purchased a large, old Victorian style home in Spring Lake, New Jersey. The house required substantial structural and cosmetic renovations. We interviewed and checked the references of several construction companies, including Shelter Cove Construction, that were under consideration to do the job. We ultimately chose Shelter Cove because its price was competitive and its references were excellent.

Paul Pulvirenti, the principal of Shelter Cove, and his employees and sub-contractors began their work in March and completed it in July, 1995. Paul's scheduling of the work was very professional. There were many weeks that the men worked Monday through Saturday with little down time. When the issue of extras came up - and there were a number of extras - Paul gave a detailed explanation of what he was going to do and priced the extras fairly.

Shelter Cove's work was professionally and competently done. Punchlist items were completed promptly and to our satisfaction.

Since that time Shelter Cove has done additional work on the house. We have found the pricing always to be fair, and the work was done satisfactorily. Most recently Shelter Cove was hired to dig a trench around a foundation wall and apply sealant. Prior to the work, we had had a continuous problem with water seepage: the house is over 100 years old and the brick foundation walls had never been sealed. The work was done satisfactorily and the problem has been eliminated.

Neighbors, who own a bed and breakfast across the street from our home, have hired an architect to do extensive renovation work on their building. I have recommended Shelter Cove to them and to other neighbors in Spring Lake who plan to do work on their homes.
